

Household of George Augustus Frederick, Prince of Wales (from 1812, Prince Regent) 1762-1820

Beginning on 5 January 1772, George, Prince of Wales received annual payments out of the Civil List for the expenses of his household and person. From 1773 to 1777 these totaled £7,346 10s plus extraordinaries. By 1782 this had risen to £20,204 12s 7d per annum, by 1789 to £60,000 per annum.<sup>1</sup> These sums proved inadequate to supply the Prince's artistic and domestic expenditure. In 1795, at the time of his marriage to Caroline of Brunswick, Parliament increased his annual revenue from £73,000 per annum to £138,000. Parliament also provided £27,000 for jewels and plate, £25,000 for expenses associated with the marriage, but £65,000 of the annual revenue was to go to the payment of his considerable debts. Even these amounts proving insufficient, so the Prince was granted an additional £60,000 per annum in 1803 for three years.<sup>2</sup>
